INTRODUCTION

This union listing of 1,121 Montana newspapers is the fruit of a three and one half year project centered at the Montana Historical Society in Helena, and principally funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities(NEH).

The project, to paraphrase from the original grant proposal, was to survey, catalog, and enter into the CONSER national serials data base via the Online Computer Library Center(OCLC) automated system the bibliographical and holdings information for all Montana newspapers held in publicly-accessible repositories in Montana, and to produce a union list of these newspapers. The project also microfilmed selected backruns in the Society's collection, and borrowed and filmed papers not previously held by the Society.

The running title on this list, "Montana Historical Society Newspaper Project," is a misnomer, a happenstance of the way the list was identified in OCLC. More accurately, this was the "Montana Newspaper Project," this state's participation in the ambitious United States Newspaper Program of the Office of Preservation at NEH. The program hopes to eventually fund such a project in each state and territory, and thus have records for all the nation's extant newspapers entered into a single data base. Besides eight "national" repositories, selected to enter only their own holdings because of the extent and broad geographic coverage of their collections, some 28 states are now involved in one or another stage of a newspaper project---planning/surveying, cataloging, or microfilming.

Mortana has been something of a pioneer, the first state to attempt and complete both a cataloging and microfilming phase. Several circumstances put us in a particulary favorable position to receive funds as soon as they were made available for state projects. The Historical Society had made newspapers a main concern from its inception in 1865, not long after the first Montana newspaper, the Montana Post, appeared in Virginia City. Thus the Society collection already contained the vast majority of papers ever published in the territory or state, while no other repository held a significant number of unique titles or runs. There was not the same need for coordination beween several large repositories, nor for identifying unique issues in a large number of scattered small repositories that confronts projects in more populous and older states. Certainly our relatively brief newspaper publishing history, dating only from August 27, 1864, gave us less sheer volume with which to deal. We were able to proceed quickly with a centralized project, involving only one grant-funded cataloger and assistant, supported by the regular staff of the library. Microfilming was done at the state Records Management office in Helena, which for a decade has filmed the preceding year's run of current newspapers for the Historical Society.

The project was a particular boon for Montana inasmuch as we had no bibliography of state newspapers. Technically, we still don't. A fullblown bibliography would include entries for newspapers known to have once existed, but of which no issues have been found, while non-extant newspaper titles appear here only if they form part of the genealogy of an extant paper. A comprehensive bibliography would also have attempted to fully identify proprietors and editors, a desireable reference feature and one which was attempted at the start of the project, but abandoned because of the extraordinary amounts of time that ferreting out such seemingly simple items consumes. Owners and editors are listed for some newspapers, but not for others.

Thus this is a union list, not a bibliography. But it is comprehensive. There are probably no more than thirty newspapers, probably all short-lived and some of which might not have been newspapers at all, whose titles were discovered in the course of the project, but for which no issues could be located. Certainly this listing supercedes the various fragmentary listings we have had to work with before--Winifred Gregory's classic, 1937, union list, American Newspapers 1812-1936; the various volumes from the Library of Congress, Newspapers in Microform; the Bell & Howell commercial catalog of newspapers on microfilm; the 1977 Union List of Montana Serials; various typed lists of holdings of some Montana libraries and the venerable card file by which the Society library previously controlled its collection.

The project also provided an opportunity to put more system and persistance into the search for "missing" newspapers than had ever been possible before. Somewhat to the library's surprise, a preliminary survey and follow-ups of 305 likely or at least possible places newspapers might be found flushed out 28 titles not previously represented in the Society collection, and found missing issues for 52 others.

Some of these were aleady ensconsed in libraries, historical societies and museums, but more came from city halls and newspaper offices, and several from individuals. Some had been perfectly well known to and used by local researchers, but others had been forgotten even by their owners, including one in the Society's own collection. These have now been filmed, along with issues from 102 titles from the Society's holdings. Such serious obstacles to Montana research as not having available on microfilm the older portions of the daily Miles City newspaper have been removed, and many small, unbound runs with a high risk of being lost or damaged have been secured on film. The only extensive runs left unfilmed are portions of such "second" dailies from the larger towns as the Butte Daily Post, the Great Falls Leader, the Helena Record-Herald, and the Missoula Sentinel. These were bypassed because of limited funds, and the fact that another daily from the same town was already available on film.

It is now possible for a researcher who has access to the OCLC system anywhere in the nation to determine if a particular Montana newspaper is available, where copies are located, and in what format. In cooperation with the most recent Union List of Montana Serials project using the Western Library Network(WLN), the Society forwarded cataloging worksheets to Northern Montana College Library, and some 397 records with Society holdings were also entered into that system.

Because the Montana project was part of a computerized, national project, it had to conform to certain rules and procedures that were either required by the system, or desired by the U.S. Newspaper Program for consistency and standardization. Persons familiar with the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules for serials, or with OCLC serials listings, should have no trouble deciphering the entries. Others may find them a bit puzzling at first, and the following information is offered to assist in the use of the listing.

DEFINITION OF A NEWSPAPER/ TYPES NOT INCLUDED

The first problem was to determine what was a newspaper. To quote from the Newspaper Cataloging Manual used by all participants in the national project, a newspaper > is a serial publication which is designed to be a primary source of written information on current events connected with public affairs, either local, national, and/or international in scope. It contains a broad range of news on all subject matter..[and is] intended for the general public.

> [It] usually has the following [physical] characteristics: it is orginally printed on newsprint; it does not have a cover; it has a masthead; and it has a format of not less than four columns per page.

While the Manual further defined eligible publics and wrestled with the problem of ethnic newspapers, it also specifically excluded "Publications of organizations which are designated primarily for members of the organization," and "Publications which are limited and/or addressed to a special clientele, [and] to specific topic or subject matter."

Despite the Manual's best effort, many serial publications remain on debatable ground. Perhaps the most noticeable absences from this list will be the student newspapers from the various Montana colleges and universities; most, but not all, religiously-affiliated serials; and most Native American tribal publications, where often any distinction between newsletter and newspaper is most difficult to make.

Montana newspapers in out-of-state repositories are also not listed. Technical features of the project made this undesirable, but fortunately circumstances make it relatively unimportant. There simply aren't sizable holdings of Montana newspapers outside the state. The Library of Congress, for instance, has holdings, by no means all complete, for only 37 Montana titles. In the course of the project, we encountered an entry already put into the data base by one of the national repositories for only 95 of the 1,121 titles. By far the greatest number of these came from the Historical Society of Wisconsin, and in each case we had to modify those records because Montana holdings were more complete.

Non-Montana newspapers in Montana repositories were also excluded, with the exception of a handful of regional newspapers in the Society's collection which we felt had particular usefulness to the early history of the territory.

FINDING A NEWSPAPER IN THE LISTING

One should normally start with the "Name Entry Index," which is actually an index by town. The entries themselves appear under title, but the titles are very precise, and not always what one might expect. They were established, for the sake of order and consistency in the face of the seemingly diabolic efforts of newspapers to make trouble for catalogers, by arbitrary but firm rules. The principal rules were that, if a title changed but then changed back within a year, a "sometimes published as" note was made, and a "see" reference appears for that fleeting, variant title. But, if the title changed for more than a year, or changed again sooner but to a title other than the original title, a totally new entry had to be made, as if it were a different newspaper. This has the consequence of breaking up what might seem to common sense to be a single, continuous run into several, often widely-separated entries. Such a relatively stable paper as the Great Falls Tribune, published without break as a daily since 1887, must be reassembled from entries under Great Falls Tribune(...1887), as it called itself from 1887 to 1890; Tribune(Great Falls...) as it was known briefly in 1890 before switching to Daily Tribune(Great Falls...) until 1895, when it altered to Great Falls Daily Tribune for some twenty-six years, returning, in 1921, to where it started as the Great Falls Tribune.

One can mistake one of these separate entries for the whole of the run that is extant, and some patience must be exercised to avoid this. The "see also" references, for example, will lead to entries for any immediately preceding and immediately succeeding titles, as will the "continues" and "continued by" notes and their kin in the body of the entry, but none of these will indicate in a single place all the title changes a paper may have gone through. An initial scanning down all the titles under a town in the "Name Entry Index" can sometimes provide a warning that the newspaper has been somewhat fickle.

OCLC = Online Computer Library Center number for this bibliographical entry
ISSN = International Standard Serial Number
LCCN = Library of Congress card number. The "sn" is a necessary part of the number, distinguishing a serials number assigned by LC from a number for the card of a monograph.

Uniform Title. A uniform title is a title to which has been added one or more qualifiers because the actual title of the newspaper would not be unique in the data base. These appear in parentheses after the title, and will be place of publication, date publication began, and frequency, always in that order, but only as many of these as needed to distinguish the title from another in the data base. After the uniform title comes the title as it appears on the newspaper. If the title is already unique, the entry proceeds directly to place of publication, without parenthesis, and dates of publication in years. No date is supplied for publication, start or end, when the first or last issue was not available.

Numeric and Chronological Designation. Here appears the volume and issue number, and the specific day of publication, for the first and last issues of a run. None is supplied if the issue was not available. When this occurs for the beginning issue, there will be a "description based on" statement in the "Notes" section to indicate the earliest issue actually available to the cataloger.

Physical Description. This line has little relevance to newspapers, but appears because the basic format is a serials format. As with other types of serials, "volumes" indicates the volume numbering system of the newspapers, not actual bound volumes, and will be blank if the title is still active. The size indicated, however,is the actual height of a newsprint issue.

Notes. Usually self-explanatory, and includes continuation statements. It should be mentioned that no continuation note appears if a newspaper changed both place of publication and title, even is the proprietor remained the same.

Holdings Information. The three-letter code, MTL, was the Montana project code on OCLC. In some states, especially where more than one institution was inputting cataloging, each repository received a different three-letter code. In Montana, with only the Historical Society inputting, all repositories, including the Historical Society, are lumped together in MTL, and the dates following the MTL represent, by year designation only, the earliest and latest issues of that paper anywhere in the state. The four-letter codes following MTL indicate particular repositories and give their holdings. Fortunately, the system permitted a spelling out of the repository's name, and it is not necessary to know the codes. When the name of the repository seems to be identical to the title of the newspaper, that signifies a newspaper office. In the materials format statements:

FM = microfilm, service copy sm = service copy, negative, meaning that the copy for use or interlibrary loan will be in a negative-appearing, white print on black background format, such as diazo duplicates. It does not mean that the copy for use is the actual negative.
s = service copy, positive format.
FMM = microfilm, master
m = master, negative
OR = original newsprint, hard copy.
FX = photocopy or other facsimile.

To add to possible confusion here, early in the project both service copy and master were listed under FM. Later, FMM was used to indicate the master negative. These earlier entries are identifiable by the startling presence of National Union Catalog (NUC) institutional symbols, such as MtHi for the Montana Historical Society. The symbols (< >) enclosing the dates of holdings are merely punctuation, these used because brackets were already reserved for other use. The dates are written Year: Month: Day. Dates may include only year, or only year and month, or all three, but they will always appear in that order. The dash with nothing following indicates that the paper is still active.

IDENTIFYING HOLDERS OF MICROFILM NEGATIVES AND ORDERING DUPLICATES

Except for a few cases, if a title is available on microfilm at all, the negative will be held by either University Microfilms (formerly Bell & Howell) or the Montana Historical Society, or portions by both. Early in the project, when negative masters were held in more than one place, the NUC institutional symbols were used to indicate this situation, with MtHi for the Historical Society, McP for Bell & Howell. This situation is fairly common because, in the late 1960's and early 1970's Bell & Howell did the filming of newspapers for the Historical Society. When this feature was discontinued, Bell & Howell's holdings of negatives no longer appeared at all. The simplest way to identify these is to obtain the current University Microfilms(UMI) commercial catalog, or consult the Library of Congress volumes, Newspapers in Microform. One may also deduce it from this listing by comparing the length of the microfilm run a Montana repository has of a service copy with the Historical Society's holdings of the negative for that title, and assuming that any remaining portion of the master negative is held by UMI. Where UMI holds the negatives, duplicates must be ordered directly from them. Duplicates from negatives held by the Society may be ordered from the Historical Society Library Library, 225 N. Roberts, Helena, MT 59620, with pricing and ordering ordering information upon request. The Historical Society is able to supply only diazo duplicates.

UPDATES AND PURCHASING SAME

This list is ephemeral in the sense that the U.S. Newspaper Program expects regular updating of the data base. The Historical Society Library has this responsibility, and will forward additions and changes of all sorts, whether to bibliographical entries or holdings, to the Library of Congress on at least an annual basis. The Library of Congress will enter these in OCLC. Libraries with access to the OCLC serials base will, of course, be able to see updated information as soon as it is entered. Anyone may order from OCLC, in either microfiche or print format, the U.S. Newspaper Program National Union List, with new lists produced every six months. Pricing and order information may be obtained from OCLC, Publications Orders, 6565 Frantz Road, Dublin,OH 43017-0702. It is not possible, however, to order updated printouts for the Montana project alone. Under OCLC copyright policy, only the inputting library is able to do this. When there have occurred sufficient changes, the Historical Society library will order another master list to duplicate, and make the lists available on a cost-recovery basis. Additional copies of the present list may be purchased from the library for $10.00, postage paid.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Thanks are owed to too many individuals, and to too many Montana repositories, public and private, who responded to the survey, dug into their holdings, offered tips on fugitive titles, or loaned papers for filming, to name them all. This almost universal cooperation and kindly reception greatly eased the way for Kathryn Otto, the cataloger through most of the project. Yellowstone Newspapers, Inc., publishers of the Livingston, Miles City, and Glendive newspapers, the Foundation of the Lee newspaper chain, and the family of Sam Gilluly, long-time Montana newspaperman as well as a former director of the Historical Society, donated funds that underwrote the microfilming portion ofthe project. Grant funds from the National Endowment for the Humanities made it all possible, while the overall costs were reduced by the Montana State Law Library, under first Claire Engel and then Judy Meadows, who kindly shared their Montana rarity, an OCLC terminal, with the Historical Society.
